A JERSEY JUSTICE ARRESTED

MR. JESSE DE GROFF TELLS A HARROW-ING TALE OF ASSAULT.

He Followed His Wife, He Says, to Justice Crossman's House only to be Thrown into the Street and Pounded—The Justice's Version Different from Mr. De Groff's-Very Serious Charges Made by Both Men

Jersey City has a sensation to talk over today, the result of the arrest of Justice Henry C. Crossman this morning on a charge of assault and battery made by Jesse De Groff, a well-known Newark avenue merchant, The arrest is the outcome of a scandal concerning three of the most highly connected families on Jersey City Heights, and the result will probably be two divorce suits, one of which has already been commenced.

Jesse De Groff in his complaint against Justice Crossman says that he called on the latter at his home on Court House place, Wednesday night to follow his wife, who was at the house, and to accuse the Justice of undue intimacy with her during her frequent visits at his home. He says that Crossman followed him to the street and struck him repeatedly in the face with some sharp in-strument. He procured a warrant from Justice Aldridge last night.

Justice Aldridge last night.

Justice Crossman, when arrested, declared that Mrs. De Groff's visits were professional, as she was preparing to prosecute her husband for alleged cruel treatment. He then stated that De Groff had been unduly intimate with Mrs. Carrie E. Wills, who is now suing for a divorce from her husband, Henry E. Wills, a prominent young lawyer, before Chancellor McGill. Justice Crossman says that he can produce five witnesses who before Chancellor McGill. Justice Crossman says that he can produce five witnesses who saw the couple together at a Union Hill resort on Sunday, Aug. 14.

The Justice's version of the whole scandalous complication is that Mrs. Wills's suit for freedom is brought about by her desire to join De Groff, and that the latter's alleged cruel treatment of his wife has been designed as a provocation for divorce. Mrs. De Groff had been disposed to realize her husband's ideas by a suit, and had been in consultation with him for some time preparing for such a step.

De Groff's accusation of criminal intimacy, the justice says, is utterly false. He states that the course De Groff has taken has decided in his mind his own course—that of exposing the whole of the scandal which he promised to make more spicy in the near future.

Mrs. De Groff's suit is now a certainty, and with both this and the Well's suit in progress at once Jersey City's bump of gossip is likely to be considerably enlarged.

It is said that Lawyer Wells has found plenty of news in Justice Crossman's story and that he will oppose his wife's suit with consequent energy.

Jesse De Groff was not at his store on New-ark avenue, this morning, and could not be found by The World reporter.

William Suydam, of 65 Nassau street, who who has gained some notoriety of late through his advertisements and circulars representing that he manufactured and sold crooked" goods for the use of sporting men whereby innocent persons might be victimized, called at the Tombs Police Court this morning. He was accompanied by Capt. this morning. He was accompanied by Capt. William McLoughlin, of the Old slip police station, who said to Justice Kilbreth that Suydam had called several times at the station-house and urged him to arrest one of Suydam's employees who, it was alleged, had gone off with the proceeds of the sale of a quantity of his swindling implements, amounting to $190, which had been turned over to him by express companies in "C. "Yes, sir, blandly replied Suydam.

"And you admit that you manufacture and advertise for sale goods made expressly for the purpose of swindling?" again asked the Justice, viewing the applicant searchingly.

"Well, as to that, Your Honor," said Suydam, "I don't want to admit anything that I may be called to account for hereafter."

"Very well, sir; you will understand that this Court cannot be used by you for the pur-pose of aiding you in your nefarious scheme, and for the collection of money derived from the sale of goods to thieves, swindlers and

LAWYER KEARNEY IN TROUBLE.

Judge Barrett Orders Him to Turn Over $17,709.51 of Other People's Money.

In the suit of Foster against Roche, the referce, James Kearney, has been directed by Judge Barrett to forthwith deposit the um of $17,709.51, with which he is chargeable. The Judge says: "The statement in Kearney's affidavit that the only money was realized from the sale of 47 Great Jones street, and the liens and encumbrances thereon are more than sufficient to exhaust the whole fund realized from the sale, is shown very clearly reinized from the sale, is snown very clearly to be false." Counsel are requested to sub-mit this affidavit and these papers to the District-Attorney, with a view to proper con-sideration of the question, whether they should not be presented to the Grand Jury. They should also be shown to the General Term.

Ex-Judge Langbein, as special guardian for the four infant children of Elizabeth Mc-Evoy, asked Judge Barrett to direct James Kearney to deposit $1.211.83, the amount of a trust estate held by him for the benefit of the McEvoy children. Judge Langbein claimed that Kearney had never filed any bond notwithstanding his statement that he had done so. It is said that Kearney asserted that his bondsmen were Deputy Sheriff Peter McGinnes and ex-Judge McQuade. To prove that this was not so, counsel for the children produced affidavits of these gentlemen in which they deny that they were Kearney's sureties in this trust.

Ex-Judge Langbein also made an affidavit in which he said that in the presence of ex-Judge Davis, before whom as referee Kearney appeared on an accounting of the trust,

GILMORE BADLY USED UP.

A BARKEEPER ENGAGES HIM IN A ROUGH-AND-TUMBLE FIGHT.

The Manager of Niblo's Garden Gets an Ugly Gash on His Forehead and Loses Some of His Hair in a Serimmage in the Barroom of the Metropolitan Hotel-The Barkeeper Arrested on Two Charges.

Edward G. Gilmore, the popular manager of Niblo's Garden, lounged behind the stage during the first two acts of Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" last evening. He had judiciously placed a snug little sum on the Yale football team, and the news of the victory had put him in a good humor.

He gathered two or three of his friends fifteen years.

Mamie left Rosana to go to her home in Mamie left Rosana to go to her home in together during the intermission between the second and third acts and strolled into the bar of the Metropolitan Hotel.

According to reliable persons very little wine was drunk by Mr. Gilmore or his friends, but in the course of the next half hour a sanguinary encounter took place between the manager and John J. Ryan, an assistant in the wine room.

Mr. Gilmore came out of the fight with a gash across his forehead which will mark him for life. It was caused by his being thrown violently, face forward, against the edge of the marble-topped bar. He had many scratches and bruises on his face and hands, and some of his gray hair was torn out by the roots. The lobe of his left ear was almost bitten through by Ryan and he had also been badly bitten on the right hand by Ryan and he had also been badly bitten on the right hand.

The utmost efforts of the bystanders could not separate the men until the fight had lasted nearly a minute and the mischief was done. When Policeman Hunter, of the Mulberry street station, entered the barroom, being attracted by the shouts of the combatante and bystanders, he found the two men struggling fiercely. Ryan had one hand on the manager's throat and with the other he was trying to tear out more of Mr. Gilmore's hair. Hunter struck Ryan with his club and dragged him off to the station-house, Mr. Gilmore charging him with an unprovoked assault.

Two of the theatre attendants bathed Mr. Gilmore's face and bound his silk handker.

Two of the theatre attendants bathed Mr. Gilmore's face and bound his silk handkerchief over his forehead. Then Deputy Sheriff John Bermingham, of 121 Crosby street, one of the friends who accompanied him into the bar, put the manager into a cab and drove to the house of Dr. H. J. Quackenboss, 19 West Eighteenth street. His wounds were properly dressed, and he was then taken to his rooms at the Hotel Brunswick and put to bed.

It is very hard to get a full and intelligent account of how the trouble arose. Mr. Gilman and his friends are desirous of keeping the matter as quiet as possible, and the bartenders and two hackmen who sympathize with Ryan seem to be afraid to speak out.

When a World reporter called at the Brunswick this morning and was admitted to Mr. Gilmore's room, Dr. Quackenboss was dressing his patient's wounds. Mr. Gilmore in a weak and feeble voice said that he would prefer not to talk just at present, and referred the reporter to Deputy Sheriff Bermingham.

'I want to make only one remark to the press," said he, "and that is that I never had anything to do with this man Ryan until last evening, and did not even know his mame until after this unfortunate affair."

Mr. Bermingham was seen in Gibson's saddlery store, but was very reluctant to give any information. "Mr. Gilmore was chatting very good-naturedly with myself and two other gentlemen named Gray and Sheridan," said he, "when this man Ryan came up to the bar and spoke to the cashier. As he turned to leave he made an offensive remark to Mr. Gilmore, and before I knew what had happened the two mon were struggling all over the room. As an incentive for Littlewood to do some of the tallest work ever done, some 250 gentlemen have subscribed a purse for him—if Fitzgerald's master achievement is surpassed. Littlewood said he felt strong and he had faith in his ability to beat the record, and he offered to do it provided an extra purse of $500 was given him. Inside of half an hour twe gentlemen subscribed $250 towards the purse, and the Englishman was given assurance that he would receive at least $1,000 more provided he crossed Fitzgerald's mark of 510 miles.

While the Englishman's great performance attracted the crowd the other four men still in the race were also doing good work.

"Yes, it is almost a sure thing that Littlewood will beat the record now," said Frank Dole. "I expect him to do great work tonight and to-morrow."

MR. MORGAN PERPLEXED.

Despite the Arrest of Dorsey He Still Advertises for His Diamonds.

Although the police have arrested William H. Dorsey on the charge of stealing $6,000 worth of diamonds from the house of Mr. Matthew Morgan, 248 Lexington avenue, and

He is, therefore, still advertising an offer of $1,000 for the recovery of his diamonds.

In response to the inquiry of a World reporter, Mr. Morgan, although very busy, found time to make the following statement: "Well, the newspapers really know more about the affair than I do. I stayed at home all day yesterday, and last night I 'left on' the night bell but not a word have I heard from the police. I told the Inspector that I was ready and waiting to be called at any moment but I haven't heard a word from him. I renewed the reward Wednesday for two days, and if I don't hear from it to-day I shall again renew it to-morrow."
